Another reason is that all the materials entering into the manufacture of a Piano have advanced in price and Pianos will be higher. We believe we can make more friends by selling the present stock at reduced prices and starting the new season with an entirely new stock at the higher prices.

We are also having a demand from the factory for Second-hand Square Pianos to sent to the interior towns and can now make UNUSUALLY liberal allowances on them in exchange for new Planes.

We know Pianos can be sold whenever good ones are offered low enough, so we propose to sell Pianos, and hundreds of them, right here in midsummer.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 13, 1899. A big run of weakfish brought great joy to the hearts of the amateur fishermen here this week, for not in many years has fishing been so poor from the pier as it has been up to the present time. Fishermen always consider that the appearance of weakfish in the waters off the shore is a sure sign that "blues" and other fish will follow, and this time their predictions came true, for two days later splendid schools of blue fish began to appear, and very large catches have been made every day since

Mr. Bradley has built for aim is surrounded by an admiring crowd during all of the sand sculptor's working hours, which extend from early morning until dark. Frequently a woman in the crowd will pose for him, and in the space of a very short time, using only a small stick and a few wisps of straw, he will reproduce a very good bust of the model.

Prof. Richards is one of the most inde-fatigable directors of amusements in As-bury Park, and as a consequence the guests of the Lafayette Hotel are enjoying one o the merriest seasons in the history of that popular hostelry. The program for the coming week is but a sample of many. For Monday he has arranged a fishing party to Barnegat, and Proprietor Frost has agreed to put up a luncheon for the whole party. The day following they will have a cycle run to Sea Bright and along the famous Rumson road, returning from Red Bank by train. On Wednesday it will be a sailing trip on the Emma B; on Thursday, an in-formal dance; on Friday, a progressive euchre party and a donkey party for the children, and on Saturday the regular dress op. Frank B. Conover, the proprietor of the

Coleman House, has announced a compli-mentary hop to be tendered to his guests and their friends on Wednesday, July 19. Preparations are being made to make the event very elaborate, and a supper will be served at midnight. Mr. Conover's many improvements have succeeded in restoring the Coleman to its former position as one of the finest hotels on the entire shore. Under the management of Mayor Frank come one of the most popular houses at this resort. Mr. Ten Broeck has been mayou of Asbury Park ever since it became a city, and this is his first experience as a hotel proprietor. The story may be told briefly when it is stated that he has proved him-self as successful a boniface as he has as chief executor of one of the largest resorts in the United States. Prof. Dare has been engaged as master of ceremonles at the hotel, and each week is presenting a unique feature. Last week it was a farmers' dance, and this week he gave a colonial dance and minuet, at which the young people powdered their hair and wore old-tim

July 13, 1800. This week more guests have arrived here than at any time since the opening of the season. Two hundred have registered since July 6. There does not seem to be a great rush for pleasure, other than the brilliant conversations indulged in by chummy-looking parties on the verandas. Gentlemen go round hugging the duplicate whist boxes under their arms on the hunt for players. and hugging the green tables when the players are found; but this is among the elderly, quiet people who cannot chase the golf balls or dance at night. The young people are given to doing both. This morning was an interesting one on the golf course, and the following are some Deadly Dull Waiting for August Events-Washingtonian Arrivals. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

BAR HARBOR, July 12, 1899. The delay of the season caused by the destruction of the Kebo has made the past week of little interest socially. The talk is now altogether of the casino. The need of some place in which to hold larger functions has suggested the idea that the old swimming pool building might be just the thing. The plan in view at present will have constructed there by August a kind of temporary casino, which will be a convenient substitute for the time being.

Next week the season will begin in earnest with dinner dances at the Malvern. There will be two a week, Wednesdays and Saturdays. On Sunday evening it is the intention to hold a musicale with some unusual features, which, strange to say, are in the nature of a vaudeville. The Malvern hops in the past have vied with the Kebo in popularity, and now that Kebo is no more the famous inn will attract more than ever society visitors. The golfing season has taken on a new lease of life with the return of the crack players from Otwentsia. The ladies' tournaments and the larger competitions will come on about the latter part of July. The tournaments for the cups offered by Miss Draper and Mrs. Lippincott will begin next SPRING LAKE, N. J., July 13, 1800. Each year Spring Lake becomes more beautiful as it develops and matures, and there have been few seasons in the past where such a concepted effort has been made by both cottagers and hotel people to make the season a success, which means the comfort and pleasure of all who spend the summer on this beach: The big Monmouth House is already well filled, and the

The Casino is practically the cottagers' club house, being patronized almost exclusively by the cottage colony and entirely supported by them. The large, commodious building is finished entirely with natural woods, both on the interior and exterior, and completely surrounded by broad, airy verandas, one side of which faces the sea, not a stone's throw distant. The recention with decembers and reading faces the sea, not a stone's throw distant. The reception, with drawing and reading rooms, are richly furnished and perfectly appointed. There are complete facilities for billiards, pool, bowling, an excellent cafe and restaurant and a suite of private dining rooms.

Natural Attractions for Cottagers and Hotel Guests-Driving on the Beach. special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

BELMAR, N. J., July 13, 1809. Facing the bright waves of the Atlantic and flanked by the waters of Shark river on the north and west, by a little estuary on the south, this resort is one of the brightest and most attractive on the coast The life of the cottage colony is distinctly social, though naturally much of the gay ety centers around the hotels. The proprietor of the Columbia, the largest of these, is untiring in her efforts to make life pleasant and attractive for her patrons and friends The ball room is thrown open every even ing to the lovers of "the light fantastic," and on Saturday nights a formal full-dress hop is given to the guests and cottagers. BLOCK ISLAND.

A Summer at Sea With the Conven-

Block Island is about seven miles long by lve wide, situated in the ocean, ten miles from the Rhode Island shore and about fifteen miles from Montauk Point, the mos easterly extremity of Long Island. Though thus pleasantly isolated from the stifling land breezes and any symptoms of that whining pest, the mosquito, it is not cut off from everywhere at all. Four lines of steamers run daily to the island. There are both telegraphic and telephonic communications with the mainland, and mails come daily on two of the steamer lines. The daily papers are received here at noon. During the winter there are, of course, no guests here, but the place is inhabited the year through by several hundred farmer-fishermen, a plain but sturdy folk.

One comes here to get the benefit of the glorious air, the unending breezes, the matchless bathing facilities, the sailing, fishing and driving.

All kinds of sea food are to be had here the famous Block Island blue fish, codfish lobsters, &c., are caught and are served in every style. The fruits, meats, &c., come from the numerous island farms.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS PUBLIC SCHOOL Bids Opened Today for Its Constru

Proposals for constructing an eight-room public school on Kenyon street between 12th and 13th streets, Columbia Heights, were opened by the District Commissioners today and were as follows: George W. Corbett, $32,793.45, with $3,000 extra for a fire proof first floor; Gleeson & Humphrey $31,800, and $2,800 extra for a fireproof first floor, and N. H. Thomas, $28,840, and $2,300 extra for a fireproof first floor. Mr. Thomas also adds $1,500 to his bid if the Commissioners decide to enforce that specification which provides for the retention by them for one year of that amount. For furnishing the heating apparatus for the school but one bid was received, that of H. I. Gregory, who offered to furnish the apparatus for $2,725, deducting $150 if iron smoke pipe be omitted, and adding $400 if utomatic heat regulator be used. Congress provided the sum of $47,500 for the purchase of a site and the construction of the building, and it is understood that Commissioners have about $37,000 available with which to construct the build ing, having paid $9,375.30 for the site.

DECREE FOR COMPLAINANT.

Against Beal! and Others. Chief Justice Bingham, in Equity Court No. 1, this afternoon signed a decree in favor of the complainant in the case of Leander Van Riswick against Lillie M. Beall and others. Some months ago the complainant, through Attorneys Lambert & Lambert, filed a bill against the defendants, alleging that he and they owned, as tenants in common, property known as lots 1 and 2 in square 701; that he had been compelled to expend about $1,000 more than his proportion in payment of taxes and for the preservation of the property, and be-cause, it was alleged, no division could be made in kind, the court was asked to decree a sale and reimbursement of the mony expended.

By the terms of the present decree the title to the property is vested in Wilton J. Lambert and Charles Bendhelm as trustees for the purpose of making sale at public auction, while the question of division of proceeds and extra allowance to complain-ant are referred to the auditor of the court for statement. Attorney Bendheim represents the defendants.

Washingtonians are getting pretty well scattered, and every day there are new departures. In a fortnight or so plans for the autumn may be discussed, although anything like a resumption of social life may not be expected here till October. Those who have no chance of leaving the capital at present may take some consolation in the fact that it is deadly dull as vet at all the summer cities, and the scarcity of whether sojourners are by the sea or on the mountains tops, golf is the popular diversion, and, in fact, the every-day employment. The departures for Europe are by no means on the wane, as many have deferred sailing until the height of the rush was over. There are a few weddings yet on the books here, which will give a pleasurable thrill to the acquaintances of the happy couples. The young ladies of Mrs. J. T. Kelly's Sunday school class of the Fourth Presby-terian Church held a lawn fete last evening at the residence of Mr. John Selby, Holmead Manor. The occasion was in honor of their teacher, Mrs. Kelly, who is very soon to leave for her summer recreation. Appropriate remarks were made by Mr. Jas.
